"The Omicron variant is spreading rapidly across the country and likely here on the Navajo Nation. There is only one confirmed case of the Omicron variant on the Navajo Nation, but our health officials continue to work with their partners to conduct sample sequencing to identify more possible cases. Our best defense against this variant are the COVID-19 vaccines and booster shots. We have to remain strong and keep pushing back on this modern-day monster and keep taking precautions such as wearing two masks in public, limiting travel, and staying home as much as possible. We are in this together," said Navajo Nation President Jonathan Nez.

Health care facilities on the Navajo Nation continue to administer COVID-19 vaccines. If you would like to receive one of the COVID-19 vaccines, please contact your health care provider and schedule an appointment.

"Thank you to all of the health care workers and first responders who continue to work around the clock to help our people and to save lives. We must continue to practice safety measures and do everything we can to help our health care workers. Please be safe and keep praying for our people," said Vice President Myron Lizer.
